

National Innovation Framework: Two experts from Silicon Valley meet Jugnauth

The Minister Jugnauth, surrounded by two experts from Silicon Valley, Vaibhav Parikh and Milind Mundankar.

Two experts from Silicon Valley, including Vaibhav Parikh and Milind Mundankar, met on Monday, Minister of Technology, communication and innovation, Jugnauth, to consolidate the National Innovation Framework. The latter, which are in Mauritius until 3 June, were invited by the ministry of guardianship in order to develop a robust infrastructure, to facilitate innovation, promote the 'Capacity Building' in terms of education and career, identify job opportunities in the technology sector and create the ecosystem that will promote innovation, incubators and 'start-up'.

In a statement to the press after the meeting, Vaibhav Parikh said his visit to Mauritius is to ensure that the country embarks on the right track in terms of innovation and employment opportunities. Silicon Valley has become a mainstay in America through innovation and Start-Up. To this end, it has planned a series of meetings with the various actors engaged in the field in Mauritius.

Vaibhav Parikh is currently a partner in the Bangalore Office of Multi-skill, a subsidiary of the international law firm, Nishith Desai Associates. He has extensive experience in technology transactions.

He gave advice to several companies regarding investments in e-commerce. He also participated in the development of plans to raise funds for several Start-Up companies. Milind Mundankar, Director-Technology Nishith Desai Associates who is also Chief Technology Department, was responsible for all IT aspects.