CHANGES PROPOSED TO INDIA'S LAW ON CHILD LABOUR

Child Labour Prohibition and Regulation Act, 1986 (CLRA) is a landmark legislation that prohibits the employment of children in any form of labour or work. The Act was enacted in 1986 to replace the Child Labour Prohibition Act, 1949. The CLRA has been amended several times, with the most recent amendment being the Child Labour Prohibition and Regulation (Amendment) Act, 2012. The 2012 amendment introduced significant changes to the Act, including the prohibition of child labour in all forms of work, regardless of the nature of the work or the number of children employed.
